

Nyaya Health is a 501 (c)(3) non-profit organization working with communities in Nepal and with the Nepali Ministry of Health to develop healthcare services in the poor, western regions of the country. Our mission is two-fold:

- 1) To develop healthcare capacity and the provision of free community-based healthcare in rural Nepal; and
- 2) To establish and disseminate a scaleable model of healthcare delivery in regions affected by poverty, isolation, war, and neglect.

Health care development

Nyaya's health care development activities are based in the district of Achham, Nepal, and are centered at the Bayalpata Hospital. Achham is one of the poorest regions in South Asia, and shoulders some of the world's highest mortality rates, particularly among women. Following a decade-long civil conflict, the health infrastructure of the region has been severely damaged. Nyaya's services function in tandem with both the regional and national governments of Nepal. Our collaborations with the government help us to work towards full integration with public sector health programs, including staff capacity building and the development of the evolving Nepali public health system. Our organization employs an all-Nepali staff with supervision and training from volunteer public health experts both within Nepal and from the United States. All medical care is provided free of charge, with a focus on health equity and outreach to the poorest and most marginalized patients. Programs include maternal care, outpatient, inpatient, emergency, HIV, tuberculosis, and community outreach services.

An Open Source Organization

In an effort to develop and disseminate a scaleable model of health service delivery in resource-poor settings, Nyaya strives towards the highest standards of transparency and accountability. All of our clinical protocols, data management and administrative planning documents, and budget and financing activities are publicly available online.
